

NATIONAL HEALTH EQUITY | GRAND ROUNDS

Noam N. Levey

Senior Correspondent, KFF Health News

Panelist, Follow the Money! Understanding the Structural Incentives for Inequity in Health Care and Beyond

Noam N. Levey is a Washington, D.C.-based senior correspondent for KFF Health News, where he is currently producing “Diagnosis: Debt,” a multi-part series on medical debt in the United States in collaboration with NPR and CBS News.

Noam joined KFF Health News in 2021 after 17 years at the Los Angeles Times, the last 12 as the paper’s national health care reporter based in Washington. He has reported on health care issues from more than three dozen states and four continents and won numerous honors, including the prestigious NIHCM award for his 2019 series “Inside America’s High-Deductible Revolution.” Noam has also been published in Health Affairs, JAMA and Milbank Quarterly.

He started his career at newspapers in Duluth, Minn., Montgomery, Ala., and the United Arab Emirates. Prior to the LA Times, Noam was an investigative reporter for the San Jose Mercury News. Noam has a degree in History and Near Eastern Studies from Princeton University.